

News Release

11 November 2019

Aviation stakeholders at AFRAA's 51st AGA aim to boost air connectivity in Africa

Balaclava, Mauritius – The African Airlines Association (AFRAA) in partnership with Air Mauritius has kicked off AFRAA's 51st Annual General Assembly with a call to support African airlines to achieve sustainable operations for improved air connectivity in Africa.

This year's Assembly was officially opened by the President of the Republic of Mauritius and has brought together more than 400 delegates from across 60 countries. It was noted that the theme of the summit "Success in an integrated and interconnected Africa" will help uncover challenges, opportunities, lessons and recommendations that will help galvanize efforts towards making the aviation sector in Africa more resilient and competitive.

Speaking as Chief Guest at the Opening Ceremony, H.E Paramasivum Pillay Vyapoory, Acting President of the Republic of Mauritius said: "I am delighted that the AFRAA AGA is being held in Mauritius following a successful Stakeholder Convention last May. Our island state is a vivid example of the impact Air Connectivity can have on a country's economy. Africa is a continent of opportunities. Only a collaborative effort from all of us can help unlock the potential of aviation and stimulate further economic growth on our continent. I wish all delegates a fruitful summit."

In his opening speech, Mr. Abderahmane Berthé, AFRAA Secretary General said: "In an effort to boost the competitiveness of African airlines we have created the AFRAA consulting unit which will serve as a knowledge and expertise hub for the African air transport market. Furthermore, our vision, mission and strategic objectives have been revamped to ensure we can better meet the needs of African carriers so they can become key players and drivers of African economic development."

He added that the governance framework of the Association has been redesigned to enhance efficiency and effectiveness.

On his part, Mr. Somas Appavou, CEO of Air Mauritius said: "Most agree that in order for African aviation to achieve its true potential, a major paradigm shift is required; not only among key players, but also among all stakeholders within the continent's aviation ecosystem. Improved collaboration among African airlines is probably the single most urgent target we must set for ourselves because alone, no African airline will successfully overcome the hurdles of scale and the high cost base that are holding back the African aviation industry."

Mr. Appavou also reiterated his wish for the creation of a first African Alliance.

Deliberations over the course of the 51st AGA which feature high level partners such as the International Civil Aviation Organization, The International Air Transport Association (IATA), the African civil aviation commission and others will delve into matters of interest of the African air transport market including the reconciling of the Single African Air transport market with airline strategic plans, growth avenues to be found in positive synergies and the next steps towards enhancing competitiveness to boost employment creation, revenue generation and continued economic transformation.

AFRAA currently represents more than 85% of the air transport market in Africa and has recently grown its fraternity with four new members namely: Safarilink aviation, Air Djibouti, Air Senegal and Uganda National Airlines.

About AFRAA

The African Airlines Association, also known by its acronym AFRAA, is a trade association of airlines from the member states of the African Union (AU). Founded in Accra, Ghana, in April 1968, and headquartered in Nairobi, Kenya, the primary purposes of AFRAA are to foster commercial and technical cooperation among African airlines and to represent their common interests. AFRAA membership of 42 airlines cuts across the entire continent and includes all the major intercontinental African operators. The Association members represent over 80% of total international traffic carried by African airlines.

About Air Mauritius

Created in 1967, Air Mauritius has flights to and from Europe, Asia, Australia, and Africa serving 22 regional and international destinations. Air Mauritius is a SKYTRAX 4-star rated airline and has received several international awards. has received several international awards recognizing the quality of its service on the ground and in flight, including several distinctions at the prestigious World Travel Awards for Leading Airline. As an IOSA-certified (IATA Operational Safety Audit) airline, safety and security is their top priority. The airline's fleet consists primarily of Airbus aircraft with state-of-the-art equipment. In addition to this, Air Mauritius is also approved by the EASA (European Aviation Safety Agency) and can perform maintenance for European operators.